NO JOKE FOR HIM.

Small Boy Given Richly Deserved Thrashing in Approved Style.

Summary punishment was meted out the other night to a particularly offensive specimen of a small boy. As a Brooklyn elevated train left the Cliy Hall station for the bridge, a youngster about the platform, spat at a passenger through the open window. The man had done nothing to the boy, had not even seen him, in fact.

The youngster had of course counted on getting out of reach at once, but he had not reckoned on the alertness shown by his victim. With a wild grab the screaming culprit was safely caught and pulled into the window, geting a sounding box on the ear by the way of earnest money. And the her hing get he way of earnest money. And then he pringed that good right arm rose and fell like the piston rod of a machine, each descent augmenting the continuous running chorus of staceato yells contributed by the patient.
